Our Beligious Column. WHAT DOTH HINDER ME?

The Universalist.

We observed last week that there were three well-defined classes of sex. A powerful moralist has said that chould not be held at all responsible.

Those who believe that sin must be invariably punished, but that it receives its penalties in this world.

Those who judge that the punishment of sin will extend into eternity, and for woman to become. Since the case of Paradise. Not as a toy, a clog, westler, or prize-fighter—no, a help-meet, such as is fitting for man to desire, and for woman to become. Since the ment of sin will extend into eternity, but not be everlasting. worthy of farther notice, inasmuch as the common conscience of men teaches them that in their sins they are guilty of a wrong, for which they deserve to be chastised.

The second will demand more particular attention. These admit, words, to barter her own Eden? nay contend for, the guittness of all sin, and ascert that it is not possible for it to becape its merited reward. The peculiarity of their position is that they assert that all to this opinion, are here punished in tionally rewarded.

This is an intelligible position; let us see how in accords with those facts, which have fallen under our common observation. Is it true are regulated in strict proportion to

On the other hand, is it true that the divine providences, like an avenging Nemesis, closely pursue the wicked, and pour their merited fury upon his guilty head? Are the noted sufferers of the land its noted criminals? So far are these things from southern papers.

thoughtful observer? Job in his day, asked, "Wherefore do the wicked live, become old, yea, are mighty in power?" and the Psalmist said, "Their eyes stand out of charity, courage and devotion by the as other men; they have more than who during the last four years has earned as other men; they have more than two thousand three hundred and eight heart can wish; and Cato sighed that dollars with her sewing machine, during this world was given over to wicked

There are two classes of human beings whose experience bears directly upon this point, and really, females and lufants. There is per-haps no man who will deny that as it seems to us settles the question; women, as a class, are purer and bells. A stiff pique suit will not do; it is the other hand that there is no huswomen, as a sex, suffer greatly more Here then is one pelpable contradiction to the theory of these friends. Another, no less marked, is found in the case of infants, who undoubtedly represent so that she is able to survey herself and keep cool. human purity far beyond any other class; and yet whose helpless innocence is almost constantly attended with physical pain. But these friends are not disconcerted by these facts, so manifestly in opposition to their opinion. It driven to it, they will admit that God's outward dealings do not correspond with the manifested characters of men; but, say they, we have overlooked the inner, spiritual sancreproaches of a guilty conscience.

The Princess of Wales is described as looking very thin and worn, with a lovely looking very thin and worn, with a lovely Though men may not suffer outwardly, as they deserve, yet they do in-she is said to have lost in a few years all the freshness and bloom of youth, which wardly.

position, for we can readily understand the justice of such an arrangement. The inward pangs of an of identically the same material and same the severest punishment which the A brave girl, the daughter of John Fields of St. Albans, Vt., entered her father's burning barn last week; and while counterbalance any external differences which might exist.

Here again our appeal is to the well-known facts of every man's experience. Is it true that conscience upbraids us in proportion to our wickedness?

Let us ask the drunkard how his present mental experiences compare with his early transgressions of the law of sobriety. Will he tell us that verely now than it did then? Let Louise and Lorn, roses, shamrocks, us question the profane swearer. He thistles, birds and sandry other things. his conscience chides him more sewas, perhaps, greatly startled when, years ago, his first oath broke forth, under strong temptation, from his lips. How is it now? Does his daily profanity cause him proportionate trouble of conscience? Examine the hardened murderer as to his soul's history. Will be tell you that his conscience has now become so acute and sensitive, that though formerly he could murder with impunity, that now he could hardly free his hand to thrust the dagger into his latest victim's heart?

We all know that just the contrary of these things is the record of trary of these things is the record of the trary of these things is the record of human experience. In our earliest departures from right, we can not her mother, in May, but not on a lecturing go far astray; but gradually we school ourselves to sin, until its most frightful atrocities are committed without hardly disturbing our equanimity. This fact, Pope, who certainly was no friend to orthodoxy, has enshrined in the familiar lines :

"Vice is a monster of such frightful mein, As to be hated, needs but to be seen; But seen too oft, familiar with her face, We first endure, then pity, then embrace."
